

Max van der Stoel Award

For extraordinary and outstanding achievements in improving the position of national minorities in the OSCE participating States.

What is the Max van der Stoel Award?

The Max van der Stoel Award is a prize of €50,000 that is presented every two years for extraordinary and outstanding achievements in improving the position of national minorities in the OSCE participating States. Established in 2001 by the Ministry of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, the Award honours Max van der Stoel, who was the first OSCE High Commissioner on National Minorities (HCNM).

Who was Max van der Stoel?

Max van der Stoel (1924–2011) was a Dutch statesman who had a long and distinguished career. He was appointed as the first OSCE HCNM in 1992 and served until 2001. He was twice Minister of Foreign Affairs of the Netherlands, and held seats in both the upper and lower houses of the Dutch Parliament. He served as Permanent Representative of the Netherlands to the United Nations and was awarded the honorary title of Minister of State by the then Queen Beatrix.

How is the winner selected?

The office of the HCNM manages the selection process. After drawing up a shortlist of candidates, a specially composed international jury, chaired by the High Commissioner, chooses the winner.

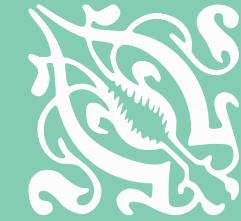

Eligible candidates include international organizations, non-governmental organizations, research institutes, government bodies or individuals in the OSCE participating States.

OSCE field presences and institutions, and delegations of the OSCE participating States are encouraged to nominate candidates. Anyone else can propose an eligible candidate by contacting the office of the HCNM, which will decide whether to nominate the proposed candidate.
